Creighton Mine The Creighton Mine is a large lead and zinc mine located at Creighton, Queensland, Australia. The mine contains a high grade open cut with drifts mine. The mine was developed by The Lead and Zinc Corporation who are the operators of the mine. The Creighton Mine is one of four large lead and zinc mines owned by The Lead and Zinc Corporation located in south west Queensland. The other three being the Callide Mine, the Mount Chalmers Lead and Zinc Mine and the Mount Korumburra Mine. History The mine was opened in 1968 and currently produces about 5 million tonnes of ore per year. Geology Creighton is situated in the Mount Chalmers Field within the Chalmers Lead Zone and the Blackall Formation. Mining methods The Creighton Mine consists of a high grade open-cut and an underground diamond drilling system. The open-cut is being mined by a 3.5 million tonne per year dragline and an 8 million tonne per year two shift stope rescue dragline. Both haulage systems are powered by twin Allison NT800 V turbo jet engines. The underground operations is being hoisted by a single manual mining machine which is used to gather the mined ore from the excavation face. The ore is then transported by truck to haulage points where the ore is stockpiled in preparation for loading on rail. The mine uses a combination of ground control room automation, full time control for the underground operation with a 4 person shift with a pump assistant and a pitman to monitor and undertake manual pumping. Ore is then transported by rail to the Mount Chalmers Lead and Zinc smelter where it is smelted. References Category:Lead and zinc mines

Chart For Windows 10 Crack is a light weight, easy to use charting application. It is perfect for demonstrating data charts, i.e. for beginners and also for simple charts to an intermediate level. Features of Chart: Chart is a command line utility, used for generating charts from tab separated file, text files or comma separated files, using either fixed width or automatic width for labelling columns and/or rows. The main advantages of this type of chart is that it is intuitive, light weight, quick to set up. The major disadvantage of this chart is that only the first column is used to generate the labels. This can be useful for demonstration charts (i.e. for beginners) but the user is unable to see the labels for the remaining columns, so the application wont work for actual data. A more advanced feature is the inclusion of a random integer for the number of rows and columns. This allows for the generation of charts with different randomised dimensions. The available options are as follows: Column Widths You can specify the width of the column labels and/or the number of columns. Rows You can specify the width of the row labels and/or the number of rows. X and Y Labelling You can specify the width of the column labels and/or the number of columns. If the row labels are less than the number of rows, then the labels will be padded on the left. There are two types of chart - Fixed Width and Automatic. The Fixed width chart has you specify the width of the column labels and numbers. Automatic charts are often better for visual representations and are suitable for most uses. The Automatic chart will label the column and row numbers after the data in each column or row is completed. Orientation Orientation can be Vertical (default), Horizontal or Landscape. You can choose whether the horizontal axis is on the left or the right side of the chart. Background Colour and Border Background colour and border can be specified for each chart.
