Former NOPBSE chairman Charles St. Martin said that he knew that the rating of some public schools was being manipulated, but he couldn't prove it. "I've seen things that are phony," said St. Martin, who retired in 2003. "When I look at the numbers on a particular school, a certain year, I can see that something's not right." St. Martin said that schools often will "engineer" their grades by changing them after first time grading periods have ended to create an "up" or "down" grade for the next year's report. "I'm not saying the system itself is evil," he said. "It's just that whatever is being done, whether it be changing grades or inflation, is being
