Send web traffic through your own server in order to analyze the requests and responses, get headers, cookies, and bodies of your requests. Use the tool to inspect data like the hostname, URL, referrer, browser type, etc. inProxy has a neat user interface that allows you to see all the requests and responses for a website (or a domain). Send requests through your own server and send responses through the server. In addition to that, you can create your own rules on how requests should be sent and how responses should be sent back to the client. inProxy History: Vulnerability in headers processing: inProxy Downloads: inProxy (Site: inProxy.org, Product: inProxy Web Debug Proxy) inProxy (Site: inProxy.org, Product: inProxy Web Debug Proxy) inProxy (Site: inProxy.org, Product: inProxy Web Debug Proxy) Free Proxy Browser: inProxy (Site: inProxy.org, Product: inProxy Web Debug Proxy) inProxy (Site: inProxy.org, Product: inProxy Web Debug Proxy) Opendoor is a simple, but incredibly powerful and useful tool that allows you to analyze the browsing behavior of your website visitors. The program enables users to create custom scripts that will be used to analyze incoming traffic: if you're looking to parse the hostname and IP address of each request, this is a program that can be the answer to your needs. Depending on the choice that's been made, the program will display statistics about each visitor that hits your website, based on the requests they have sent and received. Users can also view the raw headers that were exchanged during the sessions, and inspect them for further details. If you're looking to analyze the cookies that have been set or deleted during your site's visits, this is an essential tool for your toolbox. The interface of Opendoor is incredibly easy to use, since it only requires the user to enter the domains that they want to test, along with a few configurations. Upon hitting Start, the program will start to record the user's activity, which can be a session, or a few sessions if multiple user accounts need to be handled. Depending on the settings you've chosen, this process will record and log information about each request (using the same cookie names and values that are sent
