Tunable orbital moment from ferromagnetic dilute magnetic semiconductors. The spin-to-orbital coupling in the magnetic minority carrier of dilute magnetic semiconductors (DMS) can be significantly enhanced by choosing materials with large band offsets, similar to those used in p-i-n (PIN) diodes. Here we show that for a noncollinear magnetic configuration the compensation of magnetization by electrons, or orbital magnetization, in the DMS is rather large and varies from zero at the antiparallel magnetization direction of two different ferromagnetic layers, to maximum for parallel alignment, in accordance with the sign of the induced effective g factor. This unusual magnetic behavior is also associated with a strong dependence of the charge transport on the orientation of the magnetization of the ferromagnetic layers.
