"My poor baby, my poor brother, my poor family — they were the ones who lost everything," the teen's mother, Romony McNeill, told WDIV-TV. "I was at work at Kroger and I could see the whole thing." But she says her niece, who was 8 weeks pregnant, suffered burns over 30 percent of her body. She also suffered a collapsed lung, a broken collarbone, a broken leg and a shattered pelvis. Her family is in critical condition. Police say the fire started in the back bedroom when the nugget got too hot. Neighbors say the temperature was so high that it melted all of the burners and ash. "They were trying to tell me, 'Mommy, Mommy, help me,' and I put my face in there and I saw my baby brother and my niece, and they were covered in blood." Romony said. "My little niece, she's so precious," McNeill said. "She's just 2 years old, she's so young, it's going to hard for her. She's going to have to deal with everything." McNeill said her niece had an appointment with her doctor that morning because she was having health issues. "It's kind of hard for a child to deal with because she can't understand it. She don't have a full grasp of things," McNeill said. Calls to the gas company have not been returned, but the family is waiting to hear if their insurance will cover the family's medical bills.Q: Change Access textbox color on focus I'm trying to make a custom Access form with a textbox that changes from black to grey when
