Smash up the galaxy by connecting to several different factions, then take your fleet to the next level by building fortresses, training new champions, or upgrading your core fleet with the bonus ships you've unlocked. present. The C-terminal tail has been reported to stabilize nucleation of the amyloid fibril and to tether ribbons of fibril in a mixture of amyloid-forming proteins [@pone.0053706-Elam1], [@pone.0053706-Elam2]. Interaction with this C-terminal tail is facilitated by α-helix-rich motifs in the amyloid-forming region [@pone.0053706-Elam1] and there is direct evidence that it shields a specific portion of the hydrophobic part of the amyloid-forming region [@pone.0053706-Elam1], [@pone.0053706-Elam2], [@pone.0053706-Chiti2]. Although IAPP~1-30~ can form amyloid fibrils without the C-terminal tail, the shielding of the hydrophobic region by the C-terminal tail of IAPP~11-30~ may be required for the formation of mature amyloid fibrils. Thus, the shielding of this hydrophobic region by the C-terminal tail may help the formation of mature amyloid fibrils (Fig. 5{ref-type="fig"}). It is possible that the shielding of the hydrophobic region by the C-terminal tail of IAPP~11-30~ facilitates the growth of mature amyloid fibrils since the C-terminal helix interacts with the hydrophobic portion, and the shielding may well reduce the exposure of this hydrophobic region to water. However, this shielding effect is transient and less effective than the binding of the whole C-terminal tail to the hydrophobic region, which makes the folding of the helical portion of IAPP~11-30~ difficult because the shielding effect vanishes after the binding of the C-terminal tail to the hydrophobic region. In other words, the shielding of the hydrophobic region by the C-terminal tail of IAPP~11-30~ may accelerate the growth of mature amyloid fibrils without
