"Norman's Great Illusion" is a game about a year in the life of an engineer at a factory in an oppressive society, where nobody seems to know what to do, and everybody is waiting for something to happen. This is a story about how our instincts and his inner wisdom can defeat the system. And ultimately change it. The game has seven possible outcomes. Will you be the one who will change the world? You can choose from a wide selection of dialogue choices. Will you be able to distinguish between the systems? And free yourself from a lifetime of slavery, or accept your fate? You can play two mini-games, one of which requires high intelligence and reflexes. Little did I know, but the decieme day of the year was a great day for me, as I have a lot of friends coming to visit me, which is amazing, but also I have been invited to release a game for free as a first promotion. The protagonist of the game is a young innocent man with a power of free will, a skillful thief, hardworking and honest. However, he doesn't have the necessary willpower, he can not stop himself from making the worst decisions. We have mentioned in the description of this project two themes that we will try to portray in the game: the matter of life and the freedom of will. "The game starts in the remote seaside city of Saint Phillip, in the late 19th century. Here you work as a member of a small research and development team engaged in the preparation of new meds for the treatment of gastritis. The game starts with the death of one of your coworkers and the decision to leave the plant. Now, you have to live a year as an engineer at the same plant and face the social tensions of the time. The player's decisions in the game affect the outcome of the story but also the overall development of the technology and the administration." Norman's Great Illusion is a visual novel game (visual novel) entirely written and illustrated by me. ENJOY THE GAME AND ONLY BUY IT IF YOU ARE HUNGRY OF PLOT WIDTH AND DARK FICTS AND IF YOU FILL THE TREASURE BOX WITH PRECIOUS GEMS AND IF YOU ARE ENJOYING YOURSELF. "When you want to treat something, you have a choice between two possible opposite treatments, one of which will make the illness disappear, but the other one, which will only not necessarily make the problem disappear, but will cause it to be more complicated. In that sense, the choice is as great as the choice in the role-playing game. You have the choice between the sercuous strategy, which wins the game, and the simple but risky strategy, which loses the game. The player can be a wise, experienced, powerful, or even neutral character, but, in any case, he/she must be always aware that the choice he/she makes will change the development of the story, the plot, and the outcome of the game. The basic concept of the role-playing game is that you choose the right strategy, and that, when you have done the best that you can do, everything is decided for you. But, if you choose the wrong strategy, you will get the worst possible outcome." Norman's Great Illusion is a visual novel game (visual novel) entirely written and illustrated by me. What's new:

Norman's Great Illusion is a play by Jim Thorburn, a professor of Writing and BFA playwriting graduate of the University of Arizona. In 2009, Norman's Great Illusion received eight nominations in the "Best Play" category by the prestigious Arizona Theatre Company. The fringe production made its West Coast debut at the Los Angeles Theatre Center and its east coast debut at the Berkeley Street Theatre followed by other productions at numerous theaters, including the Nantucket Project, Delaware Theatre Company, the American Conservatory Theatre, the Arena Stage, the Guthrie Theater, and numerous universities, colleges, and theatre companies both in the United States and abroad. This contemporary satire takes place over the course of a day in a Northern Idaho town called "Fremont" in the summer of 2011. It is based on the true events leading up to when a black teenager named Jimmy Norman attempts to assassinate a public official in Fremont on July 4, 2011. Norman's Great Illusion was written by Jim Thorburn, directed by Chase Payne, and designed by Rebecca Johnston as part of the 2010 "University of Arizona," College Fringe Festival. The "University of Arizona" program is a collaboration of the Arizona Theatre Company (in association with the University of Arizona) whose mission is to "creat[e] a rich and diverse community for the development and promotion of the arts." The University of Arizona's College Fringe Festival is a unique interdisciplinary theatre festival in which a majority of players and producers are students of the University of Arizona. Dr. Jim Thorburn and Chase Payne have a combined 19 years of experience working with the Arizona Theatre Company as freelance writers, actors, directors, and designers. This Austin, Texas production is another Fringe hit: ("The noise was deafening, but did anyone notice that the actors were doing that expletive? Or the language that could be a sexual orientation slur, even a racial slur? Or the story which seemed to crash into emotion and issues, out of nowhere? What did everybody else notice but me? What do they pay the actors to do?") The East Coast premiere of the play was presented by Clones, Baltimore at the invitation of Lance and Julie Gassman as part of a production called South Side Soul Vol. 2: The Underground Experience. The play subsequently traveled to Rustbelt
