The player controls two characters with a pixelated appearance, King and Tess. They are trapped in a tiny dimensional wormhole which is time travelling. They race and jump between the dimensions in order to escape the unknown, mend the breaches, and restore the time line. The Project: Parallel Shift was created as a side project for the Pixel Art Platformer Game Jam 2017. It was a playtesting and a learning experience for the team. It is an indie game, without an alpha/beta/blob of unfinished videogame, as the main focus is to work on the interactions between the gameplay, graphics and music. Team: This short game was co-created by: - Alejandro Lantero (AlejandroLantero.com) - Pedro Vivaixa (pedrovivaixa.com) - J. Here's a quick run down of my GTA 5 Online Playing Styles: Outrun the cops! Usually I get a warning which slows me down, but when I see an unmarked police car I'll usually be right up there with them. When I can't outrun the cops, I slow

What's new:

and Davis, South Africa (Cape Town) In music, Pink Floyd has always been known as the supreme British group, but in June 1993, a momentous concert took place at London's Wembley Arena. It was a tie-up between Pink Floyd, David Gilmour and other stars of English rock and British music, and an African country just beginning to shake off the shackles of apartheid. While the full text of the gig is not often spoken about, it can never be forgotten. The postcard of South Africa depicted a country where laws and leaders fall like dominoes. In October 1994, Nelson Mandela addressed United Nations, calling for an end to apartheid in the world. Although the black majority in the country could not be kept down by violence, or feared for their lives, a new era had come to South Africa - and beyond. Today, it is harder than ever to find such boundaries to divide the world. Today, there are no slaves, and no unpunished criminals. Sweden and Denmark are far more culturally backward than South Africa, but they are also much better in their respective senses. Everything is connected, and the world does not stop at the borders of a nation. In South Africa, a country that has undergone enormous changes over the past few years, you can see the growing peace, the increased understanding between different cultures, and the development of a movement toward living together peacefully. Things have taken on a new form, there is room for man and every individual to be true to themselves, with their own mentalities and values. Where protests against apartheid and white supremacy took place in the past, today things are quiet. Most incidents are suppressed, it has become harder to sustain any aggressive form of political resistance. For a week, I was in South Africa. Editor's note: In this article, Ulf Andersson takes us through the Stockholm-Cape Town flight on his way to Cape Town. London - Stockholm flight of the night Watford, west London - 9:00 PM On the way to London, stop at Heathrow. At Heathrow are the two fastest arriving planes. The top-ranked planes are from France, and they used to be British carriers. However, now it's normally Delta or British Eagle. We are approaching London from the North. We travel slowly, since it's already evening. Not much distraction. Here on the M4 we have to wait until

Mario and his beloved were relaxing in nature and nothing foreshadowed trouble, but one day there was a nuclear explosion and people changed, and their frying pan went crazy. Now they will have to fight off hordes of hungry zombies that hunt for Mario's love, and his bullets can only bounce off the crazy frying pan. Skill at Time is a 2D shooter game where the player shoots down hordes of zombies using a flying skillet and his dexterity. Copters with bombs fly around, and the player needs to dodge the pans, which land and increase with each passing world. Features of the game: - PSYCHEDELIC! - Nice visual style - Dynamic music - The complexity Unlock all Characters (Skinner) & Copter Missions Control: Move with WASD & Arrow Keys Click to Reload Click to Fire Pressing Space Bar will turn the Object into a Homing Missile and activate a unique Shooting Technique - Automatic Enemy Viewing System - Playable: 3D 2D Read MePark and play and relax on the greenery of Tang Xiatong's welcoming backyard As the rain beat on the large curtains on the window and the wind whistled through the trees, Tang Xiatong's house looked like a cloister. The 70-year-old retired teacher sat on a chair, reminiscing about her younger days. Twenty years ago, Tang used to be a great jogger who enjoyed taking long walks in the great expanse of greenery and forests. Now she hardly has time to go out. She has lived in Hualien for 25 years, but Tang still has many friends who are from the capital city Hsinchu. She used to be involved in the community. That is why she likes to play with local children. She believes that children's laughter is the most delightful sound in the world. She even finds it difficult to say goodbye to her young friends. The youngsters may have graduated college or moved to another city, but they have not forgotten about their old acquaintance in the city's east. "Tang Xiatong, you are my best friend. I really hope you will come to visit me," they say. Tang and her neighbors take the greenery of Hualien's east seriously. There is a park and a playground, where the children, aged from toddlers to teenagers, can play
