Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an implant for the repair of cartilaginous tissues such as menisci within a joint, wherein said implant is shaped to form an anatomically correct geometry that is substantially congruent with the outside of the knee and forms an anatomically correct and permanent fit within the knee that mimics the strength, stability and durability of normal meniscus cartilage. 2. Description of the Related Art There are a number of patients suffering from traumatically induced damaged cartilaginous tissue including the menisci within the knee joint. The prior art has developed a number of cartilaginous tissue implant materials and devices, wherein said materials have been used in an attempt to repair said cartilaginous tissue and allow the patient to reduce or eliminate the likelihood of arthritic degeneration associated with the loss of cartilaginous tissue. Prior art intra-articular tissue implants have included a variety of biocompatible implant materials such as homologous meniscus tissue, allogeneic meniscus tissue, autologous meniscus tissue, xenografts, and cadaveric and cultured meniscus tissue. However, all of the materials, devices and methods used in the prior art do not provide sufficient support for the repair of the damaged cartilaginous tissue or can cause arthritic degeneration within the joint due to loosening or migration of the implanted material. In addition, after such repair, the joint is typically left unstable or hypermobile in the afflicted area, so that the patient exhibits an increased risk of developing osteoarthritis. Thus, the need exists for an intra-articular tissue implant that allows for the repair of damaged cartilaginous tissue and does not cause arthritic degeneration by replacing or adding additional meniscal tissue in the articular space.With the release of Android 5.0 Lollipop and a host of new features, one of the most important changes for many Android users will be accessing the device's lock screen and unlocking it.
