While the RAW format can enable you to manipulate your images later, it is not recommended for use with digital images as you can't view them directly in the RAW format. Each image format has a unique look and feel and will give you a different way to manipulate your images. JPEG is a lossy compressed format, while RAW captures all the data in a file without compression. RAW images are like the archives where you keep all your precious memories, while JPEG is the way you take a photo—it's a short-term memory. When you save an image, you choose whether to save it as a JPEG or to create a RAW file, with the RAW format containing all the original data in the image. When you capture an image with your digital camera, choose the option to record in your camera's proprietary RAW format. As you accumulate your photos, you can use software to convert the RAW format into JPEG so that you can use your digital camera and computer interchangeably. When you download and view your photos on your computer, you can apply a variety of filters and exposure correction tools to them. When you shoot a RAW format photo, your camera saves a RAW file and includes an embedded data file that contains the image data. As you develop your digital photography skills, you may want to shoot in RAW mode. The upside to shooting RAW is that it is a more versatile format with much more data to allow for creative postprocessing. RAW files have more room to store data and include more of the expression in question, using the format "%d" (the type of the value) followed by the format string. How do you think about this class? How can I achieve the 2 goals mentioned above (one is clear)? A: Your second point is far more important than the fact that you can, I think. Imagine the case where the last element of the array is updated to something other than 1: `public int max; public void setMax(int max) { this.max = max; }` It is clear what max must be if you have such a setter, but it is completely invalid. You would need to document this behavior in your API. So while I think your answer is good, I think your second point is even more important, and you should probably do more research into the matter and become more familiar with the pitfalls of over-usage of the getter/setter paradigm. A: If you really have to have the max field in the code, there is really no way to do it. Every member of the struct should have its own properties, so if you really want to pack the information about maximum into a single field, then each member has to look like this: `public struct TBBW { public int id; public int bbw; public int index; public int best; }` Another example is the second variant of the class, where you have one field for best quality of a group. You have to distinguish these cases in the source code of the class. It would be of little help if the maximum quality of a block would be stored in a single field of the class. If you can switch to the class variant with the getter-only fields, then you don't have to make things complicated. It may not be the most intuitive way, but it is much simpler. You don't have to do the work that is needed to provide the missing methods and accessor fields, if you simply have simple getter-only fields. Finally, you could think about using a data structure that supports packed access. This means, that you have to pack the information, that you want to store in a field, into one value. The disadvantage is, that you have to create the structure, that you want to put the information into,

Q: PHP if script reload page Possible Duplicate: How do I call a PHP script from outside? On my page there are 2 links, one allows downloading and one doesn't. The one that doesn't download is ridiculously long and in Javascript it is checked like this : `if (iframe.contains('...')) { }` And in the iframe content there is a function that changes the contents of the download link. I have a PHP script in the header. It refreshes the page so when it gets the header, it checks if there is a link in the iframe. If so, it changes the link so it doesn't download. I think it's not working because when it checks the link it is refreshing the page, and I'm not sure if I can use `if (iframe.contains('download.php')) { }` Any ideas? A: from the php iframe example.php: `echo " "`; and `iframe.php`: `click` Left ventricular end-systolic pressure-length relations of the canine heart: the effects of beta-adrenergic agonists. We studied changes in left ventricular end-systolic pressure-length relations after in vivo administration of a beta-adrenergic agonist, dobutamine, to increase heart rate and contractility in 9 closed-chest, anaesthetized, volume-loaded dogs. Ventricular volumes were measured by the sonomicrometric method and left ventricular end-systolic pressure by the thermodilution technique. Dobutamine reduced heart rate from 110 to 50 beats per minute, and end-systolic volume from 20 +/- 3 to 19 +/- 3 ml. Load increased the slope and maximal negative dP/dL, but not the length at which dP/dL = 0. There was a weak correlation between the maximum negative dP/dL and the left ventricular end-systolic pressure-volume relation (r = 0.36, p less than 0.05). The maximal negative dP/dL and end-systolic pressure-volume relation increased by a similar magnitude. We
