Automatically Generate Maps With Map Vector Graphics (MVG) This beginner guide describes how to use the automatic output options in Adobe Illustrator to generate professional maps with the Map Vector Graphics (MVG) format. Step 1: Open a New File. A new Illustrator document opens by default when you open an SVG file. Step 2: Choose a Color. Select the colors you want to use. You can select the colors from the Swatches palette. Step 3: Select the Type. Select a text or vector graphics element that you want to apply the colors to. Step 4: Apply the Color as a Fill. Select the first color. Then, choose Fill, Overlay, or Gradient fill. The Gradient fill settings allow you to adjust the fill of the symbol as it varies in color. Step 5: Use the Gradient to Control the Colors. You can use the Gradient tools to change the gradient settings for each of the colors. The Gradient controls allow you to specify how the colors should vary. You can modify the colors and the gradient type. Step 6: Hide the Type so the Color is the Only Fill. The type needs to be visible to create a vector shape. However, the type that you want to replace is the only fill, so it can be replaced with the gradient colors. Step 7: Group the Symbols. Group the symbols in a folder or folder icon. The symbols should be grouped together in the same location. This enables you to rearrange them in the document. If you select a symbol, you can see the colors it uses in the Swatches palette, along with the swatch name. Step 8: Arrange the Symbols. You can drag and drop or resize the symbols. The symbol symbols should be arranged so they are in the correct order for the map. Step 9: Lock the Symbol Order. You can lock the symbols in the correct order so they are not moved or resized. Step 10: Duplicate the Symbols. Duplicate the symbols to make additional copies. Step 11: Modify the Symbols. The duplicate symbols can be modified, similar to modifying symbols in Photoshop. Step 12: Use the Layer Locks to Apply the Color to the Objects. Use
