Q: jQuery AJAX table creation I am making a table where the user can search for an id that has to be chosen by his chosen choices (the table is going to be a choosing for something). I am trying to create a function that lets the user choose the column that is going to be the one that is searched and that is to show the id that he chose to in the row. I am doing something wrong but I cannot tell what it is and I really appreciate any kind of help. `$(function() { // Column search $('#searchColumn').change(function() { if($('#searchColumn').val() == "id"){ //$('#searchColumn').text('Column Searching'); $('#searchColumn').text('id'); } }); // Filter $('#filter').change(function() { if($('#filter').val() == "id"){ //$('#filter').text('Column Searching'); $('#filter').text('id'); } }); // Add rows $('#addRow').click(function() { $('#filter tr:first-child').clone(true).insertAfter($('#filter tr:`

Inhibition of erythropoiesis by human hybridoma antibodies specific for glycoprotein C or A. This report describes the production of human hybridoma antibodies specific for glycoprotein C (GPC) or glycoprotein A (GPA) and their effects on erythropoiesis in mice. The antibodies were screened for their specificity to GPC and GPA by ELISA and flow cytometry using red blood cells (RBC) from animals expressing either of the erythroid cell surface antigens. Hybridoma supernatants were screened for their ability to inhibit the binding of anti-GPC antibodies to RBC. One hybridoma supernatant, specific for GPC and exhibiting a titer of  $2 \times 10^{-4}$ , inhibited the binding of six different anti-GPC antibodies to RBC. Another hybridoma supernatant, specific for GPA and exhibiting a titer of  $3 \times 10^{-4}$ , inhibited the binding of two different anti-GPA antibodies to RBC. In addition, hybridoma supernatants were tested for their effects on erythropoiesis in mice. The supernatant obtained from the GPC-specific hybridoma inhibited erythropoiesis in animals injected with anti-GPC antibodies but not in animals injected with an isotype-matched control antibody. The supernatant obtained from the GPA-specific hybridoma inhibited erythropoiesis in mice receiving injections of anti-GPA antibodies. The hybridoma antibodies described here may be useful in diagnosing red cell disorders involving the expression of erythroid cell surface antigens and in determining the etiology of red cell disorders. Fresh, juicy, and undeniably delicious, our paws and claws are a flavorful feast for the senses. But you'd never know it by the recent fight over the rights of dogs on Petco's Facebook page. We've all seen the idiotic debates online from Facebook, Twitter, or social media, where someone has an opinion about a topic that they aren't a qualified to speak on and they argue like the devil is chasing them through the woods, hoping to see their point of view converted into a misty eyed notion that they are right. The thing is, they are only seeing one side of the argument. So here is Nick
