Her Twitter page is littered with tweets (including one recently from John McCain) announcing her historic victory. Good for her and for her supporters. It's great that we have a member of Congress who will stand up for wild lands and animal advocates. But the fact is that she was the only candidate who was consistent with her anti-fracking, pro-solar, anti-coal, pro-wind position. She also said that as a congressman, she would never vote to fund the Keystone pipeline. Yes, it took the GOP (and the U.S. Chamber) to nominate and elect a member of Congress who will stand up to pro-corporate candidates like Rick Perry, but she won. We can't be sure what will happen in the next election with Republican leadership encouraging those anti-environment candidates. Let's keep her seat, and hope that she stands strong for wild lands and all animals.Q: Is there a good way to delay/obfuscate SQL injection? I'm working on a website that deals with user-generated content. What I'm mostly concerned about is SQL injection. The site will store generated content in a database, and the user can
